WOULD BAR
CORPORATIONS
FROM POLITICS

A petition and bill were filed in the House today by Representative Charles F. Davis, of Plymouth, to prohibit corporations from making payments or contributions for political purposes. Representative Davis is a Democrat and one of the leaders of his party in the lower branch of the Legislature. His bill is considered by his colleagues as one of the most drastic ever submitted to prevent corrupt practices in elections by powerful corporations. The text of the bill is as follows:

Section 1.—No corporation organized under the laws of this Commonwealth, and no corporation doing business in this Commonwealth, shall, in order to aid or promote the nomination of any person to an elective office or the election of any person to an elective office, directly or indirectly, use or through any person or persons, give, pay, expend or contribute, any money or any valuable thing to any person, person, corporation, political party or political committee. Elective offices shall be construed as defined in chapter 11 of the Revised Laws.

Section 2.—Any corporation which violates the provisions of this act shall be punished by a fine of not more than $5,000, and any officer, director, or agent of such corporation, who violates the provisions of this act, shall be punished by a fine of not more than $1,000 or by imprisonment for not more than six months.

BORDEN ADMITS HASTE BY FALL RIVER OWNERS—FIGHT TO THE FINISH.

Richard P. Borden, of Jackson, Maine & David, counsel for the Fall River Cotton Manufacturers' Association, positively admitted that the Fall River mill owners were "hasty" in refusing to consult with operatives when alleged grievances arose, also that the manufacturers are convinced the operatives were right in refusing to have extra hours imposed on them without compensation.

In course of an interview with a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter at the State House today, concerning the proposed legislative investigation of the strike, Mr. Borden issued from the strike. They have learned that the operatives are not alone concerned in the controversy, and that the manufacturers have learned a lesson from the strike. They have learned that the operatives are not alone concerned in the controversy, and that the manufacturers have learned a lesson from the strike.

But will fight to finish.

But, despite these admissions, Mr. Borden declares the manufacturers now mean to fight the strike to a finish, though he admits the strikers have been obliged, in some instances, to "give up the necessities of life."

In giving the manufacturers' side Mr.

Under Fire for Hours She Bore Up Well Though Bordering at One Time on Nervous Collapse—Identified Pin Alleged to Have Been Found in Tucker's Pocket.

Amy Roberts, the maid in the Page household, whose positive identification of a pin alleged to have been found in the pocket of Charles Louis Tucker, charged with the murder of Mabel Page, as the property of the slain girl, caused a sensation at the trial to-day, underwent a severe cross-examination by James H. Vahey, chief counsel for Tucker, this afternoon.

The girl, small, thin-faced, with low, barely audible voice, was on the verge of nervous collapse. Once during her direct examination a recess of five minutes was necessitated by her condition. She went from pale to feverish red, and at times seemed about to faint.

Her testimony UNSHAKEN.

Robert furnished energy in an effort to see that the witness, without flinching, spoke in such low tones that he heard little of her testimony, but its import was apparent to him. His face never lost its calm, impassive expression, however, and he did not seem the least concerned.

SHE NEARLY FAINTED.

The witness was in a terribly nervous state. When she was called to the stand she was very pale. Soon afterwards her face became flushed, and as her testimony progressed she seemed her coat and frequently experienced perspiration from her face. District Attorney Standen, repeatedly urged her to raise her voice, but she did so only for a few minutes at a time. It would again sink into a low monotone, barely audible.

At times she seemed to totter in her position. It became necessary after a while to allow her a rest, and a recess was taken for five minutes. Almost fainting the girl left the stand and walked to her room. The maid, Amy Roberts, who had been identified as the girl who had been found in Tucker's pocket, was called to the stand and testified that she had seen the pin in the pocket of the girl who had been found in Tucker's pocket.

PROFESSOR BENNIS, BOSTON AMERICAN GAS EXPERT, ON STAND

PROVES PIPE LINE COMPANY SUPPLIES HALF BOSTON'S GAS.

The effect of Attorney Robert M. Morse, counsel for the Gas Trust, to eliminate the Bay State Gas Companies from the eighty-cent gas hearing to-day was sharply rebuffed by Attorney Julius T. Auerbach, representing the BOSTON AMERICAN. He testified first as to the supply of gas to the Massachusetts Pipe Line Gas Company, the New England Gas & Coke manufacturing company of gas for sale, but purchased it from the Pipe Line, which is a distributing company only. Professor Bennis had previously testified to the worst of absolute conflict of several of the gas plants and showed how they bought the gas at 30 cents per 1,000 feet and sold it at 81 per 1,000 feet. Professor Bennis testified last week that the Pipe Line could not be relied on to furnish over 1,000,000 feet per day, on account of uncertainty of the supply from the gas companies. The Pipe Line, however, has been found to supply the city with gas at a cost of $100,000 to $150,000 per day. The value of the gas companies which make gas would be enhanced by a prospect that they might do so, whereas, on the other hand, the fact that the Pipe Line could be relied on to supply the companies would tend to depress the value of the plants in the opinion of the commissioners. For this reason Counsel Auerbach, for the Gas Trust, called Professor Bennis to the stand.

CINCINNATI MAGNATE READY TO STEP DOWN AS HEAD OF BASEBALL TRIBUNAL.

Special to the Boston American.

CINCINNATI, Jan. 11.—(Coming to a halt with President Ben Johnson of the American League over legislation, and because of the latter having expressed testimony on the Jack Taylor case which, it is said, would have been submitted by Mr. Herman and President Putnam of the National League, Chairman Herrmann of the National Commission announced today that he would resign as the head of baseball's chief tribunal.

Herrmann feels that he is not being shown the consideration due him in his position, and rather than be a discredited commissioner he will step down. His efforts are being made to have him re-

ANNOUNCED LETTERS.

Anonymous letters, written in connection with the Page tragedy, caused the maid's collapse yesterday. For months the girl has been persecuted by an anonymous letter writer. The contents of the letters have been of such character as to cause her intense nervousness.

When she was told yesterday that she would be called as a witness she became so nervous and excited that it was with difficulty she was soothed and calmed by Mrs. Freeman, a sister of Mabel Page, who lives in large measure, recovered her composure to-day.

AMY ROBERTS testified that she had been employed as a general housemaid by the Pages for six years. She described her employer as a quiet, middle-aged woman, who was very kind and considerate. She was very fond of Mabel Page, and she was very fond of her mother. She was very fond of her mother, and she was very fond of her mother.

RECORD CROWD.

Edward Page and his wife, Mrs. Brown, of Andover, accompanied Amy Roberts, of Weston.

The crowd today was again a record breaker. Several hundred persons lined up the sidewalk and street long before the trial began.

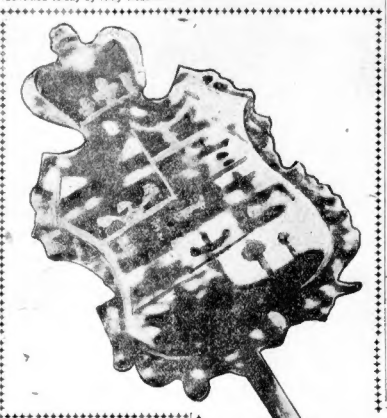

The court room was quickly filled when the doors were thrown open, and hundreds were turned away.

As usual, a large percentage of the throng was women. Many of these have long been regular attendants at the trial, following their husbands and staying throughout the trial.

'AN AWFUL MISTAKE,' SAYS MRS. TUCKER

By Mrs. Lucy A. Tucker, Mother of Charles L. Tucker.

Written Exclusively for the Boston American.

WHEN we left the court room last night we all felt better satisfied with the day than with any previous day of the trial.

With the expert testimony finished and the other witnesses being called in such rapid succession it makes us all feel that the prosecution is finishing its case; and that the end is not far away.

Louis came in for the daily call and he seemed fresh and bright and said he was feeling fine. What a blessing it is that his health remains so good!

He does not talk to us much about the case, except to comment now and then on some particular bit of testimony or to speak of some special witness.

I have little fear but that he will endure the strain quite as well to the very end. Of course, no one can tell what the reaction may be.

When the tension is lessened everything will be different. Although the waiting outside the court room is better than being in the room, still it is very tiring to be shut up there from 9:30 in the morning until 5:00 o'clock at night, hearing only by the different editions of the papers and the hurried news which is brought us, of the progress of the case.

Seems Wrong to Sit so Long Idle.

Mr. Tucker and Walter Smith and read, and Walter has been writing letters part of the time.

I am such a busy woman in my own home and am so used to moving about from room to room that it seems almost a wrong thing for me to sit all day with folded hands.

We all feel that we are helpless to lift Louis's burden from him day by day as he is compelled to sit there, but he tells us that just to hear that he is in the next room is a greater comfort than he has known for almost a year.

It seems impossible for me to escape the trial for a moment, even long enough to let my mind rest on some other topic for a few minutes' rest.

It is all that I hear on the streets or the cars or the trains. And it is very, very seldom that I hear anything harsh said about Louis.

People seem to think that some awful misdeed has been made. I often hear remarks of sympathy for Louis and for all of us.

Everyone seemed yesterday to be waiting with great interest for the appearance of Amy Roberts. I suppose she is one of the most important witnesses. And naturally I am most anxious myself to know what she has to say.

Go Home Every Day Exhausted.

We are all three of us getting almost used to the routine of the life under these circumstances. The first week neither Mr. Tucker nor I slept at all restfully, but caught little naps here and there and came into East Cambridge in the morning almost as tired as when we left it at night.

However, I find that nature is asserting herself. Now, we are so thoroughly exhausted when the trying day's experience is over that we sleep soundly and find ourselves refreshed for the next day's battle.

Of course, I shall be glad when the defence begins to present its case, for I am sure it will not take long to show that Louis is just what we all believe him—innocent.

"When your attention next called to the case, what happened next?" "I went to the room."

"What happened next?" "I went to the room."

"What happened next?" "I went to the room."

"What happened next?" "I went to the room."

AMY ROBERTS TELLS STORY ON STAND

Miss Amy Roberts, maid in the Page family and previously a companion to the murdered girl, was the first important witness of the day.

After George E. Smith, co-defendant of Joseph Brown, of Weston, had testified to having been on the street at the time of the murder, on March 31, that he walked down the street and saw the body of the girl lying on the sidewalk.

At twenty-five minutes after one o'clock he did not recall seeing anyone there or any other about him at that time.

Miss Roberts was called on her turn.

"In house six years," asked Mr. Randolph.

"Where do you live?" "In Weston."

"What place?" "My father's house."

"How long have you lived at Mr. Page's house?" "A little over six years."
